GROWING OLD.

You are growing old," they tell us.
Every year;
You are more alone," they tell us.
Every year;
You can win no new affection,
You have only recollection,
Deeper sorrows and dejection,
Every year.

There come new cares and sorrows
Every year;
Darker days and darker mornings
Every year;
The ghost of dead loves haunt us,
The ghosts of changed friends taunt us,
And disappointments daunt us
Every year.

Too true! Life's shores are shifting
Every year;
And we are seaward drifting
Every year;
Old places changing fret us,
The living more forget us,
There are fewer to regret us,
Every year.

But the true life draws nigher
Every year;
And the Morning Star climbs higher
Every year;
Earth's hold on us grows slighter,
And the heavy burden lighter,
And the Dawn Immortal brighter,

CHAPTER VIII.—CONTINUED.

A grawsome sight those sailors had presented when called up for sentence in the morning, and a remorseful quartette they proved. Moreover, to the consul general, who had been called in in the interest of fair play for Jack, they declared that they were innocent of all evil intent. They only went in for a little fun with the soldiers. It was that San Francisco fellow who called himself Spence when he was sober and Sackett when he got drunk who brought on the row and then abandoned them to their fate. He had owned that he "had it in" for soldiers in general—hated the whole gang of them and wanted to see them well licked. He had plenty of money and would pay their fines if the police "ran them in," and now had left them in the lurch.

They had no money and were confronted with the probability of a month's labor with the "chain gang" on the public roads if the consul general couldn't get them off. So that amiable official had gone out to the flotilla and had a talk with the Colorado officers and the three brawny heroes of the billiard room battle, with the result that everybody agreed to heap all the blame on the vanished culprit in the check suit, and the sailors got off with a nominal fine and went home to nurse their bruises and their wrath against Spence alias Sackett. That fellow shouldn't get away on the Miowera if they could help it.

All this Stuyvesant was pondering over as, after stopping to leave his P. P. C. at the Pacific club, he strolled down Fort street on his way to the boat landing. The big whistle of an incoming steamer had attracted his attention as he left the consul general's to make one more call, and at the club he heard some one say the Miowera had reached her dock and would sail for Australia in the morning.

The sky, that had been so cloudless early in the evening, became somewhat overcast by 11, and the moonlight was dim and vague as he reached the landing.

In his several trips to and from the transport it happened that he had fallen frequently into the hands of a bright Kanaka boatboy whose admirable rowing and handling of the boat had pleased and interested him. "Be ready to take me out about 11:30," he had told him, and now where was he?

Several officers and soldiers were there bargaining with the boatmen, and three or four of these amphibious Hawaiians precipitated themselves on Stuyvesant with appeals for a job, but he asked for Joe.

"Him gone," was the answer of an eager rival. "Him other job;" but even as they would have persuaded Stuyvesant that Joe was not to be had and his selection must be one of their number, Joe himself came running from the direction of a warehouse a short pistol shot away.

"What kept you, Joe?" asked Stuyvesant, as the light boat danced away on the tide.

"Waller want me take him outside Miowera," was the answer; "him being warehouse."

"The deuce you say!" exclaimed Stuyvesant, turning about in the stern sheets and gazing back to shore. "Are these minding stars at the warehouse, and is he waiting for you there?"

"Huh," nodded Joe.

"Then here," said Stuyvesant, glancing moonward and noting with satisfaction that the luminary was behind a thick bank of clouds. "Turn back and row to the warehouse steps. I want to look at that fellow." So saying, he quickly threw off his uniform coat with its gleaming shoulder straps and collar device, stowed his forage cap under the seat and sat bareheaded and in his shirt sleeves.

Obedient to Joe's powerful strokes the little boat was speedily gliding in among the shallows of the sailing ships moored along the quay, and presently her stern was swung round to a flight of stone steps, and Stuyvesant bounded ashore. Over at the best landing the electric lights were gleaming and the sound of many voices chattering over boat fares was heard. Here among the sheds and warehouses all was silence and darkness, but Stuyvesant unhesitatingly strode straight to the corner of the big building and into the blackness of the westward side, peering right and left in search of the skulker who dared not come to the open dock, yet sought means of reaching the Australian steamer.

For a moment he could distinguish no living object, then paused to listen, and within ten seconds was rewarded. Somewhere close at hand between him and a low shed to his left there was the sound of sudden collision and a muttered oath. Some invisible body had bumped against some invisible box, and, turning sharply, Stuyvesant made a spring, and the next instant had grappled with some burly, powerful form and was dragging it, despite furious resistance, towards the light.

He was conscious of the sickening odor of sour whisky, of a volley of mad threats and imprecations, of a stinging blow in the face that only served to make him cling the tighter to his prisoner. Then, as they swayed and struggled to and fro, he felt that he was not gaining ground and that this unseen ruffian might after all escape him. He lifted up his voice in a mighty shout:

"Police! Police! This way!" Then he heard a savage oath, a sputtering, savage "Let go, d—n your soul!" and then felt a sharp, stinging pain in the right side—another—another; and earth and sky reeled as his grasp relaxed, and with a moan of anguish he sank fainting on the dock.

CHAPTER IX.

Vinton's fleet reached Manila. A third expedition had coaled at Honolulu and gone on its way. More transports were coming, and still there lingered in this lovely land of sun and flowers—lingered for a time 'twixt life and death—Vinton's stricken aid-de-camp, Lieut. Stuyvesant.

Of his brutal antagonist no trace had been found. The shrill cries of the Kanaka boatboy, supplementing the young officer's stentorian shout for the police, had brought two or three Hawaiian star bearers and club wielders to the scene of that fierce and well-nigh fatal struggle. All they found was the gallant victim writhing in pain upon the dock, his hand pressed to his side and covered with the blood that poured from his wounds.

It was half an hour before a surgeon reached them, rowed in with the general from the Vanguard. By that time consciousness had fled, and, through loss of the vital fluid, Stuyvesant's pulse was well-nigh gone.

They bore him to the Royal Hawaiian, where a cool and comfortable room could be had, and there, early on the following morning, and to the care of local physicians, the general was compelled to leave him.

With the brakeman to aid them, the police searched every nook and corner of the Miowera, and without result. Murray, alias Spence, alias Sackett, fugitive from justice, could not be aboard that ship unless he had burrowed beneath the coal in the bunkers, in which event the stokers promised he should be shoveled into the furnace as soon as discovered.

Every sailor's lodging house in the town was ransacked, but to no purpose. Murray could not be found.

For a fortnight Stuyvesant's fate was in doubt. Officers of the third expedition could carry with them to Manila only the hope that he might recover. Not until the ships of the fourth flotilla were sighted was the doctor able to say that the chances were now decidedly in his favor.

He was lifted into a reclining chair the day of the flag raising—that pathetic ceremony in which, through tear-dimmed eyes, the people saw their old and much-loved emblem supplanted by the stars and stripes of their new hope and aspirations. He was sitting up, languid, pallid and grievously thin, when the tidings reached him that the transport with six troops of the 4th cavalry, among others, had arrived, and the doctor, with a quizzical grin on his genial face, informed his patient that some Red Cross nurses were with the command, and that two very nice-looking young women, in their official caps, aprons and badges, were at that moment inquiring at the office if they could not see the invalid officer and be of some service to him.

Sore in body and spirit, wrathful at the fate that robbed him of a share of the glory he felt sure awaited his comrades at Manila, Stuyvesant was in no humor for a joke, and plainly showed it. He gave it distinctly to be understood that he needed no coddling of any kind and preferred not to see the ladies, no matter what they belonged to. Not to put too fine a point upon it, Mr. Stuyvesant said he didn't "wish to be bothered," and this was practically the reply that reached two very earnest, kind-hearted young women, for the attendant, scenting the possible loss of a big fee if he should be supplanted by superior attractions, communicated the invalid's exact words to the Red Cross nurses, and they went back, wounded, to their ship.

Stuyvesant's room was on the ground floor in one of the outlying cottages and its Venetian blinds opened on the broad and breezy veranda. It was far more quiet and retired than apartments in the main building, the rooms overhead being vacant and the occupants of that which adjoined his having left for San Francisco within a day or two of his coming.

"I feel too forlorn to see anybody," was his explanation to the doctor. "So don't let anybody in." But several officers from the transport got leave to come ashore and take quarters at the Hawaiian. The rooms above had to be given to them, and their resounding footsteps made him think.

"There's two ladies to take this next-door room," said his garrulous attendant that afternoon, and Stuyvesant thought opprobrious things. "They'll be giggling and talking all night, I suppose," said he, disgustedly, when the "medico" came in late that afternoon. "I wish you'd move me, if you can't them."

The doctor went and consulted the head of the house. "Certainly," said that amiable Boniface. "If Mr. Stuyvesant is well enough to be carried up one flight I can give him a larger, airier room with bath attached, where he'll be entirely isolated. It was too expensive for our visitors from the transports, but—I believe you said Mr. Stuyvesant—wouldn't mind"—tentative at which the doctor looked wise and sagely winked.

When that able practitioner returned to the cottage two young women with Red Cross badges were seated on the veranda just in from a drive, apparently, and a little dark-eyed chap in the uniform of a subaltern of the cavalry was with them.

They had drawn their chairs into the shade and close to the Venetian blinds, behind which in his darkened room reclined the languid patient. "That will drive him simply rabid," said the doctor to himself, and prepared a professional smile with which to tell the glad tidings that he should be borne forthwith to higher regions. He had left Stuyvesant peevish, fretful, but otherwise inert, asking only to be spared from intrusion. He found him alert, intent, eager—his eyes kindling, his cheeks almost flushing. The instant the doctor began to speak the patient checked him and bent his ear to the sound of soft voices and laughter from without.

"I've fixed it all," whispered the medical man, reassuringly. "We'll move you in a minute—just as soon as I can call in another man or two," and he started for the door, whereat his erratic patient again uplifted a hand and beckoned, and the doctor tip-toed to his side and bent his ear and looked puzzled, perturbed, but finally pleased. Stuyvesant said that, thinking it all over, he "guessed" he would rather stay where he was.

And then, when the doctor was gone, what did he do but take a brace in his chair and bid the attendant go out and say to the officer on the veranda, Lieut. Ray, that Mr. Stuyvesant would be very glad to speak with him if he'd be so kind as to come in, whereat the soft laughter suddenly ceased.

There was a sound of light footsteps going in one direction and a springy, soldierly step coming in the other. Then entered Mr. Sanford Ray, with outstretched hand, and the attendant, following and peering over his shoulder, marveled at the sudden change that had come over his master.

Three days later, when the City of Sacramento was pronounced ready to proceed and the officers and Red Cross nurses en route to Manila were warned to rejoin the ship, Lieut. Stuyvesant "shook" so to speak, his civil physician, persuaded the army surgeons with the fleet that a sea voyage was all he needed to make a new man of him and was carried aboard the Sacramento and given an airy stateroom on the upper deck,

Three days later, when the City of Sacramento was pronounced ready to proceed and the officers and Red Cross nurses en route to Manila were warned to rejoin the ship, Lieut. Stuyvesant "shook" so to speak, his civil physician, persuaded the army surgeons with the fleet that a sea voyage was all he needed to make a new man of him and was carried aboard the Sacramento and given an airy stateroom on the upper deck, vaneated in his favor by one of the ship's officers—consideration not made public, but Claus Spreckels & Co., bankers, had never before received such a deposit from this very able seaman in all the years he had been sailing or steaming in and out of Honolulu harbor.

HE FELT A SHARP, STINGING PAIN IN THE SIDE.

And now retribution overtook the invalid. The Red Cross had made a marvelous name for itself in San Francisco and was already organized and doing wonders at Honolulu. Its ministrations had been gladly accepted by the scores of officers and men among the volunteers, to whom the somewhat bare and crude conditions of camp hospitals were doubtless very trying. Women of gentlest birth and most refined associations donned its badge and dress and wrought in ward, kitchen or refectory. It was a noble and patriotic purpose that inspired such sacrifice.

It was a joy to the embryo soldiers to be fed and comforted day by day with the delicacies of the Red Cross tables; but there were military magicians and martinets who dared to question the wisdom of such preparation for the stern scenes of campaigning ahead of the volunteers, and who presumed to point out to the officers of this great and far-reaching charity that, while they were most grateful for such dainties for the invalids of their command, the daily spectacle of scores of lusty, hearty young heroes feasting at the tables of the Red Cross, to the neglect of their own simple but sufficient rations, prompted the query as to what the boys would do without the Red Cross when they got into the field and couldn't have cake and pie and cream with their coffee.

The Red Cross, very properly, took umbrage at such suggestions and branded the suggestors as horrid. The Red Cross had done such widespread good and was ready to do so much more that criticism of its methods was well-nigh unbearable. And now that it had obtained the sanction of the government to send out to Manila not only supplies and dainties of every possible kind, but dozens of its members to serve as nurses to the sick and wounded, it scored a triumph over rival organizations, notably the Patriotic Daughters of America, whose vice president, the austere Miss Perkins, first bombarded the papers in vain protest and denunciation, the Red Cross being her main objective, and with abuse of the commanding officers in camp; then called in person on the same officers to demand transportation to Manila with the next expedition.

The Red Cross held its head very high, and with reason. It ruffled its feathers and resented any slight. It sometimes mistook courteous protest for impudent gifts to such soldiers as were in no wise ready as vicious and unhallowed criticism, and occasionally—only occasionally—it grievously enlarged and exaggerated alleged slights received at the hands of luckless officials. And then even those soft and shapely hands could develop catlike claws and the soothsaying voices take on an acid and seething intonation, and the eyes, so ready to moisten with pity and sympathy at the sight of suffering, could shoot spiteful little fires at the objects of such divine displeasure, and poor Stuyvesant's petulant words, wrung from him in a moment of exasperation and never intended to reach the fair band of sisters of the cross, were piled high with additions, impolite, disreputable, impudent, intolerable—yes, even profane and blasphemous.

Eleven of the twelve Red Cross nurses, packed three in a room aboard the Sacramento, swore they would not have anything to do with Mr. Stuyvesant. The twelfth, the one soldier's daughter in the band, said nothing at all.

MAN-EATING LIONS.

The Belgians Abandon One of Their Stations on Account of Them.

The Katanga company, which is developing the rubber and other resources of a large district in the upper Congo basin, has abandoned the station of Kululu, which it had established on Lake Moero. Though a great deal of labor has been expended in making this station a large and desirable post the region around it became infested with man-eating lions. It was therefore decided to seek another location. Quite a number of natives in the service of the state were killed by these lions within a few weeks. The victims were dragged into the jungle and eaten. Many men saved their lives only by climbing trees, thus getting out of reach of the howling beasts beneath them. Everywhere along the paths and brooks the lions lay in wait for their prey, and no man knew when he might be struck to earth by the terrible foe lurking in the jungle all ready for the fatal spring, says an eastern exchange.

A man-eating lion is one that has tasted human flesh, likes it better than the meat of any of the animals upon which its kind is wont to prey, and therefore will eat nothing else if it is able to kill man, woman or child.

In the past three years it has been more than usually in evidence in East Africa between Victoria Nyanza and the Indian ocean. The man-eaters killed many natives and also a considerable number of laborers on the Uganda railroad. They filled the thousands of Indian and black laborers with such terror that the men refused to work until all the lions had been killed.

When man-eating lions come to the neighborhood of human habitations, one of two things must be done. Either the inhabitants must get out of the country, for their lives are not safe there for a moment, or else they must kill every lion of the man-eating type that has come into their district. It is fortunate that lions of this type are comparatively few in number. If all lions were man-eating Afrikaners would become uninhabitable, unless the world organized a gigantic lion hunt to wipe the whole species out of existence.

Lincoln's Father as a Boy.
Thomas Lincoln, the father of Abraham Lincoln, was a great story teller and one yarn that he never tired of rehearsing was a blood-curdling Indian tale. One day, when he was about seven or eight years old and living in Kentucky, he was sitting on a fence watching his father and older brothers at work in the field. Without a moment's warning a small band of Indians came rushing by on horseback. One of them, with a sweep of his long arm, seized the lad and dashed him to the ground. Little Tommy Lincoln looked up into the red warrior's face and said: "Don't kill me. Take me a prisoner." The Indian smiled. Just then a rifle cracked. Indian and boy tumbled off the horse, the Indian dead, with a bullet in his brain. Tommy Lincoln's brother had come to the rescue.—Argonaut.

Orders from Headquarters.

An Irish recruit in one of his majesty's riding schools had the misfortune to part company with his horse.

According to custom, the sergeant strode up to him and demanded: "Did you receive orders to dismount?" "I did, sir." "Where from?" "From headquarters, sir." "From headquarters, sir?" said Paddy, with a grin.—Answers.

A LITTLE NONSENSE.

While philosophy will not prevent a man from falling in love it is a well-known fact that love interferes with a lot of philosophy.—Chicago Daily News.

WESTERN PILOTS' TROUBLES.

Where They Can Not Tell from One Minne to Another What the Current Is.

They were seated on a tugboat, at the foot of Broad street, talking shop, as pilots will, three of them explaining to the fourth, who wore a broad brimmed soft felt hat and a western air, the dangers and difficulties of piloting in New York bay and along the neighboring coasts, says the New York Herald.

"You fellows don't really know what piloting is," answered the westerner, without showing that he was deeply impressed. "You tell very fine stories, indeed, but it is all child's play with you. You know what the water is, what the tides and currents are, and you have your charts and compass. That's just too easy."

"How would you like to pilot where you can't tell what the current is from one minute to another, where the depth of water is not the same from one hour to another; where the channel shifts while you are watching it; where dry land was the week before, and where on a return trip you find your course has moved into another state and been twisted out of all recognition?

"There is no making a chart under those conditions, and yet that is what we have out in Missouri. You fellows just don't know what piloting is. Why, the very last time I came down that muddy old stream, at places I found it running north where it had been running south when I went up, and heading east where before it had been going west.

"The swift current, quicksands and loose soil don't make very substantial banks, and when you go to sleep at night you can't tell where the river will be in the morning. Piloting under those conditions is tried that you people know nothing about.

"The first time I went up the Missouri I found Omaha directly on its bank, and the next time I went the city was a mile from the river. Sometimes its channel is in the middle; sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other; sometimes every place and sometimes no place.

"That river is a regular juggler, tossing Nebraska and Iowa back and forth regardless of consequences. It is now working into Iowa and building up Nebraska at a rapid rate. Come and visit me and I will show you where wits are necessary to pilot a boat, because charts and tables and compasses are no more use to you for navigation purposes than a dress pattern, a multiplication table and a sun dial."

Quant Duties in Isle of Man.

There was a quaint ceremony at Castletown one day lately when the great inquests for the three southern "headings" of the Isle of Man were sworn. The duties of these inquests are curious and interesting, since they include the presenting of punishment for all persons who encroach upon the commons and other public easements, of all persons who suffer their pigs to go unringled, and of persons who keep horses and cattle suffering from disease. The inquests have also to see that millers are sworn to deal honestly with the public.—London Mail.

Large Goat Herds, No Forests.

Greece pays dearly for her goats. They are everywhere, and wherever they are young trees cannot grow. The holm oak, for example, if left to itself attains a height of 30 or 40 feet; but it is usually kept down by the goats to the dimensions of a shrub, at the top of which they continually gnaw.—Forest Leaves.

Her First Football Game.

She—it is a rough game, isn't it? He—Why, yes; but you didn't expect to see it settled by arbitration, did you?—Puck.

Johnny Obeyed.

"Children," said the teacher, while instructing the class in composition, "you should not attempt any flights of fancy, but simply be yourselves and write what is in you. Do not imitate any other person's writings or draw inspiration from outside sources."

As a result of this advice Johnny Wise turned in the following composition: "We should not attempt any flights of fancy, but write what is in us. In me there is my stummick, lungs, heart, liver, two apples, one piece of pie, one stick lemon candy and my dinner."—Baltimore American.

Just the Man.

"I say," said the business man to the detective, "some fellow has been representing himself as a collector of ours. He has been taking in more money than any two men we have, and I want him collared as quickly as you can."

"All right; I'll have him in jail in less than a week."

"Great Scott, man! I don't want to put him in jail; I want to engage him."—Boston Transcript.

Bad Investment.

Theodore—"It's all right, darling. I have met your father, and we took to one another at once. He even went so far as to borrow ten dollars of me. Surely, he can't refuse me your hand after that."

Edith—"Dory, I'm afraid you've made a mess of it. Pa told me about the ten dollars, and said I'd better let you slide; that you were too easy."—Boston Transcript.

Best for the Bowels.

No matter what ails you, headache to a cancer, you will never get well until your bowels are put right. Cascarets help nature, cure you without a gripe or pain, produce easy, natural movements, cost you just 10 cents to start getting your health back. Cascarets Candy Cathartia, the genuine, put up in metal boxes, every tablet has C. C. stamped on it. Beware of imitations.

Uncle Eph'm.

"Dey's mo' dan one kind o' wisdom," said Uncle Eph'm. "A wold to de wise is sc'nt, but yo' don't git no chanst to say a wold to de wise guy. He knows it all."—Chicago Daily Tribune.

To The Public.

On account of ill health, I have leased THE BOURBON News office to Mr. Geo. D. Mitchell, for a term of years, who will conduct the paper in the future. Mr. Mitchell is an experienced newspaper man, having been associated with such papers as the Kansas City Journal, the Cincinnati Enquirer and other journals, and is conversant with all the details pertaining to the management of a newspaper, and I take pleasure in recommending him to the public, and am satisfied that he will conduct the News in a way that will reflect credit upon himself and the paper. Mr. Mitchell will take possession on January 1st.

In severing my connection with the News for the time being, I desire to return my sincere thanks to a generous public for the hearty support that has been accorded the paper, and bespeak for Mr. Mitchell the good will and support of its patrons. — SWIFT CHAMP.

Barnum's Monkeys

"All well—all happy—lot of fun". That is the regular report from the monkey cage of Barnum's Circus ever since the keepers began dosing the monkeys with Scott's Emulsion. Consumption was carrying off two thirds of them every year and the circus had to buy new ones.

One day a keeper accidentally broke a bottle of Scott's Emulsion near the monkey cage and the monkeys eagerly lapped it up from the floor. This suggested the idea that it might do them good. Since then the monkeys have received regular doses and the keepers report very few deaths from consumption. Of course it's cheaper to buy Scott's Emulsion than new monkeys—and that suits the circus men.

Consumption in monkeys and in man is the same disease. If you have it or are threatened with it can you take the hint?

This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's Emulsion and is on the wrapper of every bottle. Send for free sample.

HOUSEWORK

Too much housework wrecks women's nerves. And the constant care of children, day and night, is often too trying for even a strong woman. A haggard face tells the story of the overworked housewife and mother. Deranged menses, leucorrhea and falling of the womb result from overwork. Every housewife needs a remedy to regulate her menses and to keep her sensitive female organs in perfect condition.

WINE OF CARDUI

I am so glad that your Wine of Cardui is helping me. I am feeling better than I have felt for years. I am doing my own washing as well as I can and washed last week and was not one bit tired. That shows that the Wine is doing me good. I am getting fleshier than I ever was before, and sleep good and eat heartily. I can now drink Wine of Cardui, used to have to lay down five or six times every day, but now I do not think of lying down through the day. Mrs. RICHARD JONES.

You Do, or You Don't Need Glasses :

The eye being a rather delicate organ, great care should be exercised in the selection of proper glasses. Many believe that glasses should be resorted to only when the sight becomes so defective as not to be able to do without. This is a great mistake which must be combatted. Whenever there is unmistakable evidence of the need of their aid, they should be used. A neglect of this rule sometimes produces mischief which results in serious trouble if the course be persisted in.

The play of "Quo Vadis" was presented at Grand, on Tuesday night, to a full audience. The play and company was all that could be desired, and it is regretted that they did not have a better house. The scenery was unusually fine, and the acting company was the best that has been seen in this day.

THE market is abundantly supplied with rabbits. Here in Paris, the whole jobbers, or Nicholas county venders are trying to hold up the price, and make our dealers pay $1.10 per dozen, leaving them little profit, if they are reduced at 10 cents. They are necessarily compelled to retail them at 12 1-2 cents to make a profit. There is no occasion for this, for the woods are full of them, and they ought to be retailed at 10 cents, or three for a quarter. Our merchants should fix their own price when buying them.

Mr. Ed Hite, of our local fire department, visited Lexington, on Tuesday, and gave an exhibition, before the city officials, of that city, of a new nozzle for fire hose. It is styled the "Neptune" and is a simple contrivance, being about eight inches in length with a frame attachment, by which it can be hooked to a ladder, or rested upon the ground in such a manner as to direct the stream in any direction. Mayor Dunham has agreed to purchase one of the "Neptune" nozzles.

Mr. Hite took to Lexington a coupling by which with proper attachment, the Lexington fire hose can be used in connection with the Paris hydrants, in the event our city should need the assistance of Lexington again. The Parisians also took with them on their return one of Lexington hose couplings, so that it may also be arranged that if it should be necessary, at any time, for the Paris department to help Lexington, she will be able to use the Lexington hydrants and prove of great benefit. The departments of the two cities appear to be on the very best of terms, a condition that affords the people much satisfaction.

Matrimonial.

The following invitations have been received by friends in this city:

Mrs. Dudley M. Ball requests the honour of your presence at the marriage of their daughter Susan Mitchum to

Mr. Charlton Alexander, Jr., On Thursday evening, December the third,

at seven o'clock
At Christian Church
Versailles, Ky.

On last Tuesday, one of the prettiest ceremonies that has ever been seen was that of the marriage of Mr. Wm. Walker and Miss Nannye Brashear, at Hodgenville, Ky. Those present were Messrs. Ben Ridgeway, Ben Brashear, T. C. Williams, and R. D. Brown; Mesdames R. S. Thompson, Birdie Lary, B. D. Brown; Misses Alleen Liver, Madie Pusey, and Etty Branch. Mr. Walker holds a position of trust with the Northern Pacific at Lockhart, Texas. Miss Nannye was one of the belles of Northern Kentucky and numbers her friends by the hundred. She has frequently visited friends here in Paris, who will wish her happiness in her matrimonial venture.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Elizabeth Morris Goodman, daughter of J. L. Goodman, of Flemingsburg, to Mr. Horace Willis Coleman, of Fayette county. The marriage will take place in January.

Mr. Charles R. Keesee, of Mt. Sterling, and Mrs. Jessie McFarland Thompson, of Latour, Ark., were married. The Helena, Ark., World, says:

"There is a bit of romance behind this announcement, for many years ago, before either Mr. Keesee or Mrs. Thompson were married—they have both been married before—they knew each other back there in the Blue Grass State, Mrs. Keesee, then Miss Jessie McFarland, went on the stage in a company managed by her father, and in which her mother was the stellar attraction, and traveled the country over with good success. The McFarlands were friends, in his early days, of the late Lawrence Barrett, and were associated more or less intimately with other stage people of renown. In their old age, however, they settled in Helena, where their daughter married and acquired property. Lately, learning that she was here, and a widow, and alone, Mr. Keesee, feeling the need of a wife to comfort him, sought her out and won her to his way of thinking. The quiet marriage of this morning tells the rest."

Miss Sarah Marshall, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. C. K. Marshall, and Mr. W. T. Morrison, of Bowing Green, will wed on next Wednesday. Her father was pastor of Christian Church, of this city at one time.

The fire company gave a public test of direct pressure from the water works yesterday afternoon, on the public square. The new Neptune nozzle, handled by a small boy, threw a 1 1/4 inch stream, with a pressure of 85 pound to the square inch. This shows the advantage of the new, over the old style nozzles. The height of the stream was 1 1/4 inch at 97 feet, and inch and three-eights at 88 feet. A one inch of the old style nozzle 94 feet. The fire company is now in excellent shape to combat with fires.

ELIJAH WOODARD, an aged colored citizen, living in Lylesville, died on Tuesday. His life was insured in the Sun Company, for $100. The colored man, Richardson, who was killed by Buck Freeman, also carried an insurance of $150 on his life.

AN ATTACK ON MINERS.

Union Men Assault Nonunion Men Near Vincennes, Ind.

The Mine Is Run on the Co-Operative Plan, and the Operators Claim That They Can Not Pay Union Wages.

Vincennes, Ind., Nov. 20.—Four hundred union miners from Washington, Cannonsburg, Petersburg, Princeton and Montgomery arrived here at an early hour Tuesday morning, and at 5 o'clock made an attack upon the non-union miners employed at the Prospect Hill mines near this city. As a result two men are fatally hurt, and a half dozen more are seriously injured. The union miners formed at the union station and marched to the mines. Just as the men of the day shift were going on duty they were attacked, and received horrible treatment.

The union men asked for the foreman, William Scott, and when told that he was in bed, said: "All right; we will get him," and started after him, and for a short time pandemonium reigned. In the melee that followed, Mr. Scott and his family defended themselves as best they could, but were powerless.

Scott was badly beaten about the head and face, and W. P. Collins, an attorney at Washington, a brother-in-law of Scott, visiting there, sustained injuries that may prove fatal. He had a rib broken, and an eye badly injured. Henry Hannery, a miner, was so badly beaten by the men, that he had to be removed to the city where he could be given medical attention, and his injuries are such that he may die. Mrs. Scott was slapped in the face, and when she resented the attack, it is alleged that one of the men drew a gun and told her he would make short work of her if she persisted in her foolishness. Ottis Scott, the 15-year-old son, was knocked down as was also Dottie, the 10-year-old daughter of Scott.

Others that suffered at the hands of the visitors were, Robert McDaniel, Posey Knight, John Scott and Kenner Mars. All are badly bruised about the head and face. It is said there that no word was spoken to Scott until the fight began.

In the fight the stove was knocked over and a big hole was burned in the floor. Some of the miners, however, picked up the stove and extinguished the fire. The house was badly damaged. Almost every window was broken, and one of the doors was battered down.

Only 40 men are employed, and the mine is run on the co-operative plan and independently. The operators claim that they can not pay the union scale and run, but say they pay the highest price possible, and in some instances pay more than scale prices. They claim to mine from 50 to 60 tons a day, and thereby are able to give a few men employment. There is great confusion over the attack, and another raid is expected. The union miners say they will force the mine to unionize or close up, but one of the two must be done. Further trouble is anticipated.

Property to the Amount of $150,000 Destroyed—The Loss Is Partly Covered By Insurance.

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 20.—Fire which broke out in the five-story brick building of the People's Storage Co. Tuesday evening entailed a loss estimated at $150,000. Most of the damage was done to the contents of the warehouse, about $30,000 of the total loss being on the building. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

COLON CAPTURED.

The Government Forces Surprised and the City Taken After a Short Engagement.

Colon, Colombia, Nov. 21.—On receipt of the news that Gen. Albán, the military commander of the Isthmus, had started to attack the liberals at Chorrera, near Panama, the latter detached 150 men, under Gen. Patino, to attack Colon. This force embarked on board a train bound from Panama to Colon Wednesday evening at Las Cascadas Station, previously cutting off telegraphic communication across the isthmus. On arriving at the outskirts of Colon where the government usually maintained a small guard, the liberals left the train and in the initial skirmish which began soon afterward Patino was killed.

The command of the liberals then devolved on Col. Frederico Barrera, and they continued their march on Colon, arriving a few minutes after the train, thus surprising the whole town. The government troops at Colon were outnumbered by the liberals. Fighting immediately began at the quartel (barracks), which was soon taken. There Señor Jaen, a judge of the criminal court, was killed and Señor Muskus, the district representative of the department of the interior, was mortally wounded.

Fighting subsequently occurred at the town hall, which was also taken by the liberals. Among the prisoners captured by the liberals there were the prefect, guardia and the commander of the police. Señor Paredes managed to reach the gunboat Gen. Pinzon, which sailed Tuesday night for a destination unknown, probably Cartagena. The whole affair was over in less than three hours.

Communication with Panama was restored Wednesday. This revealed that no fighting had occurred there, that everything was quiet and that the city was in the hands of the government. The issue now depends on the result of the fighting which is doubtless now occurring at Chorrera, news of which is anxiously awaited here.

The liberals are busy raising reinforcements locally. They are reported to have several hundred men at different railroad stations between here and Panama.

The United States gunboat Machias landed detachment of marines here Wednesday morning. They are now guarding the railroad station and other property of the road.

At a conference between Commander McCrea, of the Machias, United States Consul Malmors, Col. Shaler, superintendent of the Panama railroad, and Col. Barrera, the commander of the liberals, the latter was informed that the marines had been landed from the Machias. Barrera promised to guard the city with his troops.

Trains will be crossing the isthmus as usual Thursday. There has been no obstruction of free transit so far. The news of the capture of Colon, which reached Panama, where communication with that city was restored Wednesday morning, was a great surprise to the inhabitants of that city.

AN AWFUL CRASH.

Seven Persons Were Killed and Several Injured in a Railway Collision on the Santa Fe Road.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 21.—In a passenger wreck on the Santa Fe railroad one mile west of Franconia, Ariz., a switch station 20 miles west of Needles, Cal., Wednesday morning, seven trainmen were killed, and three passengers and 14 trainmen were injured. Two limited trains one east, and one west bound, crashed together while running at full speed. The east bound train was drawn by two engines, while the other train had but one locomotive. The three engines were crushed and blown to pieces by an explosion which followed the collision. Both the trains were made up of heavy vestibuled cars, and several of the cars burned up. The dining cars, one on each train, one Pullman and two composite cars were destroyed.

The collision is said to have been due to a disregarding of orders on the part of the crew of the west bound limited. From all accounts, however, it is gathered that the east bound train had orders to take the siding at Franconia, and await the passing of the west bound flyer, which was running two hours late, and trying to make up time.

The east bound train failed to reach the siding, and, as the west bound train did not wait for it, the two trains collided without warning, and with an awful crash. The boiler of the west bound train is said to have exploded immediately after the crash, scalding to death those of the engine crews who had not been killed outright. The bodies of Case and Armitage, firemen of the east bound train, and Sam Brown, waiter on the west bound train, are missing, and it is believed they were burned to death.

A scene of awful confusion followed the crash. The massive engines piled in an indescribable mass of broken and twisted steel, while the scalding steam hung in a dense, suffocating cloud over the debris, amidst which the agonizing cries of the injured and dying could be heard. The heavy Pullman and composite cars jammed the dining and baggage cars upon the pile, carrying death to the dining cars crews and scotching the cars afire.

THE OLD MAID'S BALLOON ASCENSION

IT WAS some time in June that Miss Denby began to "make a show" of herself. From the modest responsibility of neutral tints, cotton gowns and a sailor hat she suddenly burgeoned forth into such a splendid radiance of millinery and mode that all her neighbors wondered. For Miss Denby was an old maid. She had accumulated modest fortune making dresses, and being 52 years old, as she admitted with a weazened smile, she had retired permanently from business and settled down to a routine of tea drinking and novel reading, relieved, if not illuminated, by daily strolls in the park and a Sunday visit to church.

Honest? Not exactly, for she had bright, bony little eyes, a straight nose that had not always been red as now, and a cute mouth that puckered up at the corner when she smiled. Her form was of the "ironing board" style—that is, neither plump nor angular—but her hands and feet were the chief pride of her romantic little heart, for they were as small as a child's. Indeed, what most astounded the neighbors when they first began to "notice" the old maid's transformation was the marvelous, shoes, slippers and gloves she wore. For instance, the day Mrs. Gallagher followed her over to the park Miss Denby's little tootsies were encased in gray, undressed kids, with—dent while strolling near the beach. He had found and restored to her a novel which she had left on a bench. The casual acquaintance thus begun had flourished by reason of his wondrous ardor and the fact that she walked daily in the park. The count had wooed and won her "with the fierce and swift gallantry of the old world," Miss Denby said, and she had resisted him as long as her sympathetic heart could withstand his eloquence.

"He's in Chicago to float a loan for the Greek government," she explained. "As soon as Crete is annexed, the count, my count" (a smile and a blush) "is to be absolute ruler of the island. But he is very anxious to depart, and the wedding day must be fixed to-morrow night. Turkish spies are constantly at his heels. There is hardly a day that he does not point one out to me. I have seen them lurking behind the bushes, and every time we part I am in agony for fear something should befall him."

Mrs. Gallagher was staring now like a big bullfrog watching a red flame bait.

"Will you come up-to-morrow night and meet him?" she hears Miss Denby say.

"I will," murmured the dumfounded Mrs. Gallagher, backing toward the door. It was midnight when she had oh, shocking! French heels. But that was not what finally set the venomous tongues of gossip to wagging.

Mrs. Gallagher had actually caught the old maid keeping tryst with a man!

From that day the poor old dressmaker's suddenly glorified wardrobe was explained. Mrs. Gallagher had watched her foregather with a handsome, dark-haired stranger, and, leaning on his stalwart arm, strolled away among the trees. It was evident that Miss Denby was in love and that her suitor was a young and dashing fellow.

"After her money, I guess," said Mrs. Jenkins to Mrs. Jones over the back fence.

Some said it was "disgraceful," others suspected that Miss Denby was a "little cracked," but they all became very friendly with her, drank her tea, admired her gowns and put themselves in the way of becoming her confidants. The good women even began to take morning tramps in the park, and the queer little dressmaker, walking with her young suitor, was mortified and puzzled at the frequency of these accidental meetings.

Finally Miss Denby decided to open her heart to Mrs. Gallagher, and she did it like this:

"Have another cup of coffee before you go, Mrs. Gallagher."

"Sure I've had seven."

"Just one more," then whispering: "I've got a secret for you."

Miss Denby blushed and simpered demurely as she poured out the tea, and her fat guest could hardly wait to come at the long-deferred mystery.

"What's your secret, Sophronia? Sure you ain't going to move?"

"Guess again!" giggled the old maid.

"Not another new dress?"

"Not that."

"I'll give up," admitted the other, who enjoyed the deception.

"A wedding!" gurgled Miss Denby.

"But, mind, it's a secret yet. I'm going to invite him up, hee-hee, hee-hee, and I want you to come and chaperone me—"

Mrs. Gallagher was staring open-mouthed.

"Sophronia Denby!" she gasped. "Married! You going to be married?"

"To the finest, handsomest, noblest, richest—he's a prince—"

"Ah, bother!"

"A Greek nobleman, Count Sardanapalus."

"And what business is he in?"

"Business! Oh, dear, none! He's a nobleman, owns an island and all that sort of thing."

The old maid seemed almost transfigured with enthusiasm. She said she had met her noble lover quite by acci-

FOR LOVERS OF FIGURES.

Some Elaborate Calculations as to the Possibilities of a Lead Pencil.

SOURCE OF ROARING RIVER.

Strange Missouri Stream That Takes Its Rise from a Spring in the Ozark Mountains.

"I have been figuring on the possibilities of a lead pencil," said a young man who has a penchant for the statistical side of things, "and you would really be surprised to know what a man can do with one lead pencil. How many words are there in a lead pencil? How many columns of newspaper matter? How many pages of a book of the average size? How many poems, essays, sermons and things of that sort may one find in the lead of an ordinary pencil? Really these questions are not easily answered, but one may arrive at a reasonable approximation by doing a little sum in arithmetic. In the first place, the average pencil is seven inches long. The average diameter of the pencil used by men who write a great deal is one-twelfth of an inch. Considering the wood and lead the point of a pencil measures about one-half of an inch, one-quarter of an inch representing the lead portion. Allowing for breaks and scratches, one-quarter of an inch of lead will write two columns of matter for the ordinary newspaper, assuming that the pencil is not of the extremely soft character. There are about 1,800 words in a full column of a newspaper of the average size. Two columns would represent 3,600 words. So we get this number of words out of one-quarter of an inch of lead," says the New Orleans Times-Democrat. "Out of an inch of lead we would get four times 3,600, or 14,400 words. Out of seven inches we would get 100,800 words. So far as the number of words is concerned, we have in this result the possibilities of the lead pencil. Allowing 1,600 words to the column this would mean 56 columns of solid matter, or an eight-page paper of the seven-column width. Two columns a day is a good average for a reporter. In order to grind out 56 columns of solid matter it would require on this basis the reportorial energies of 28 men. In other words, there is enough lead in a pencil seven inches long to keep 28 men busy for the average time put in by newspaper writers in one day. This would mean that one pencil, with due care and attention and without any unnecessary waste, ought to do one man nearly a month. A man can buy a lead pencil for five cents. The average price paid for the best newspaper of the country for accepted matter is five dollars a column. If one pencil will write 56 columns of matter, it is possible for a newspaper writer to earn, on an investment of five cents, $280. From this it would seem that there is money in a lead pencil, and on the face of it looks like one of the very best investments one could make and yet there are men in the business who look at the matter from another standpoint, for instead of being a prolific producer of wealth, the pencil generally leaves one haunted by the ironies of poverty."

Its water, coming as it does from the spring, is clear as crystal and of green tint. Fish can be plainly seen as they play among the rocks and water-soaked logs that lie at the bottom of the river a few feet from the spring. At the edge of the huge spring is what is known as the dead line which is simply a fallen tree of small diameter that rests upon a couple of rocks. On the outside of this separating line the water is knee deep, but inside of the same lies the boiling spring, thus far found to be unfathomable. A neighboring blacksmith known as the prophet, because of his sage remarks and eccentricities, attempted to find sounding by lowering into the spring a heavy anvil suspended at the end of a rope 332 feet in length. Upon failing to find what he went after at that depth some one asked him why he did not tie on more rope and let the weight down still farther. He replied that he was afraid it would fall into the hands of the Chinese and then he would have to go to the other side of the world to recover it; which remark this much-bewitched sage made without any apparent effort or bad after effect upon his constitution.

The cave overhanging the spring extends back 75 feet, and, along with its connecting chambers, forms an ample playroom for the myriads of bats which dart about the dismal vaults.

A young man attempted to dive in the big spring and bring up some important news to the world concerning its origin. He dived and swam downward as far as he was able—which was not a great distance owing to the strength of the spring, but on rising to the surface he found himself cut off from the outside world by a partition of solid rock and in total darkness. He had come up through another channel and found himself in a dungeon filled with bats without number. Failing to find an aperture through which to escape and finding himself rapidly becoming unnerved by the situation, he taxied his remaining strength to the utmost, repeated his dive and fortunately came up to the opposite side of the division which had imprisoned him, landing in an exhausted condition from which he never recovered.

The pines in the vicinity grow to huge proportions, and in the more thickly covered sections exists an illicit distillery element, which it is well to shun, unless one has the password. Owing to the wildness of the locality the sportsman need not go home with an empty bag, for game is abundant.

Women and Jewels.

Jewels, candy, flowers, man—that is the order of a woman's preferences. Jewels form a magnet of mighty power to the average woman. Even that greatest of all jewels, health, is often ruined in the strenuous efforts to make or save the money to purchase them. If a woman will risk her health to get a coveted gem, then let her fortify herself against the insidious consequences of coughs, colds and bronchial affections by the regular use of Dr. Boschee's German Syrup. It will promptly arrest consumption in its early stages and heal the affected lungs and bronchial tubes and drive the dread disease from the system. It is not a cure all but it is a certain cure for coughs, colds and all bronchial troubles. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at W. T. Brooks'. Get Green's Special Almanac.

Poison Oak Poison Ivy

are among the best known of the many dangerous wild plants and shrubs. To touch or handle them quickly produces swelling and inflammation with intense itching and burning of the skin. The eruption soon disappears, the sufferer hopes forever; but almost as soon as the little blisters and pustules appeared the poison had reached the blood, and will break out at regular intervals and each time in a more aggravated form. This poison will linger in the system for years, and every atom of it must be forced out of the blood before you can expect a perfect, permanent cure.

Mr. S. M. Marshall, bookkeeper of the Atlanta (Ga.) Telegraph Co., was partially poisoned by Poison Oak. He took S. S. S. and Arsenic and various other drugs, and applied externally numerous lotions and salves with no benefit. At times the swelling and inflammation was so severe he was almost blind. Finally, however, the swelling would break out every season. His condition was much improved after taking one bottle of S. S. S., and a few bottles cleared his blood of the poison, and all evidences of the disease disappeared.

People are often poisoned without knowing when or how. Explain your case fully to our physicians, and they will cheerfully give such information and advice as you require, without charge, and we will send at the same time an interesting book on Blood and Skin Diseases.
